China's National Climate Change Programme

As a developing country of responsibility, China has taken a series of policies and measures to address climate change in the overall context of national sustainable development strategy. In June 2007, the Government of China issued China's National Climate Change Programme, outlining objectives, key areas of actions, as well as policies and measures to address climate change for the period up to 2010. This presentation will focus on policies and measures related to mitigation under the programme. It will also discuss the role of official statistics in the development of national strategies on climate change.
