INTRODUCTION

1. The present publication is the fourth revision of United Nations Standard Country Codes (Series M, No. 49), prepared by the Statistics Division of the United Nations Secretariat and issued in 1970.¹ Like its predecessors, this publication presents a list of the names of countries or areas in alphabetical order,² three-digit numerical codes used for statistical processing purposes by the Statistics Division of the United Nations Secretariat, two- and three-digit alphabetical codes assigned by the International Organization for Standardization (ISO),³ and 12-character abbreviations used by the Statistics Division whenever abbreviated forms of country or area names are needed. The composition of geographical regions and economic, trade and other groupings of countries or areas used by the Statistics Division in its publications and databases is also shown. In addition, the annex tables show changes in numerical codes since the second revision was published, in 1982.

Countries or areas

2. The list of countries or areas shown in table 1 of the present publication includes those countries or areas for which statistical data are compiled by the Statistics Division of the United Nations Secretariat, as at 31 August 1999.⁴

3. The names of countries or areas refer to their short form used in day-to-day operations of the United Nations and not necessarily to their official name as used in formal documents. These names are based on Terminology Bulletin No. 347/Rev.1: Country Names.

4. Information shown within parentheses in the name of a country or area is an integral part of the name.

¹ United Nations publication, Sales No. E.70.XVII.13. The first and second revisions were issued as United Nations publications, Sales Nos. E.75.XVII.8 and E.82.XVII.8, and the third as a non-sales publication, ST/ESA/STAT/SER.M/49/Rev.3.

² A comparative listing in the six official languages of the United Nations, in English alphabetical order, is contained in Terminology Bulletin No. 347/Rev.1: Country Names (United Nations publication, Sales No. A/C/E/F/R/S.97.I.19), prepared by the Department of General Assembly Affairs and Conference Services of the United Nations Secretariat.

³ International Standard ISO 3166-1: "Codes for the representation of names of countries and their subdivisions - Part 1: Country codes" (Geneva, International Organization for Standardization, 1997).

⁴ Historical data published in current publications are normally shown with the nomenclature and code in effect during the reference period. For a list of codes not in current use but which may appear in connection with historical data, see the notes to annex table A.

Abbreviations of names

5. Twelve-character abbreviations for the English language names of countries or areas have been assigned by the Statistics Division of the United Nations Secretariat for use where needed in statistical publications. They have been designed to establish maximum visual association with the full name of the country or area and to ensure a logical position when listed alphabetically. Where the number of characters permits, the full name is used in place of an abbreviation. In some instances an acronym or a widely used short representation of a name is used.

Composition of geographical regions and of economic, trade and other groupings

6. The geographical regions and groupings of countries and areas included in the present publication are not comprehensive but only a selection of those which are or may be used in the compilation of statistics as at 31 August 1999.

7. Macro geographical and component geographical regions for various statistical uses are shown in table 2, for the countries and areas that appear in table 1. In order to ensure consistency in statistics, each country or area is shown in one region only. The macro geographical regions are arranged to the extent possible according to continents. Within these groupings more detailed component geographical regions are shown.

8. The selection of economic, trade and other groupings presented in table 3 is organized mainly around economic and trade interests. Some of the groupings are regional in nature, others span several continents. The groupings in this section do not necessarily include all the countries or areas shown in table 1 and some countries or areas may be included in more than one group.

Numerical codes

9. As an aid to statistical data processing, a unique standard three-digit numerical code is assigned to each country or area and to each geographical region and grouping of countries or areas shown in the present publication. These codes range from 000 to 899, inclusive.

10. Codes 896 and 898 are assigned to "Areas not elsewhere specified" and "Not specified", respectively. The designation "Areas not elsewhere specified" may be used to denote countries or areas not shown individually in a given tabulation. The designation "Not specified" may be used to denote countries or areas for which the information needed for allocation is not available.

11. Codes 900 to 999 inclusive are available for individual users for their own purposes, for example to designate countries or areas and groupings not shown in the present publication.

ISO alphabetical codes

12. Alphabetical codes for the representation of names of countries or areas have been developed by ISO.³ ISO two- and three-letter codes are given, where available, for the countries or areas shown in the present publication for reference, where an alphabetical code is preferred by the user.

Changes since the last issue

13. The geographical extent of a country or area, or the composition of a geographical region, may change over time and users should take such changes into account in their use of codes shown in this publication when relating data for different time periods. A change in the name of a country or area while its geographical coverage remains the same is not usually accompanied by a change in its numerical code. However, a change in name is generally accompanied by a change in the ISO alphabetical codes.

14. A major change in the geographical coverage of a country or area is generally accompanied by a change in its numerical code used for statistical purposes.

15. Changes in numerical codes and names of countries or areas and geographical groupings made since the second revision of the present publication are shown in the annexes.

Description of the tables

16. The present publication consists of an introduction, four tables and two annex tables, as described below:

(a) Table 1 lists the names of countries or areas in English alphabetical order and shows for each country or area its numerical code, the 12-letter abbreviation of its name and the two- and three-letter ISO alphabetical codes for the representation of its name;

(b) Table 2 lists the composition of macro geographical regions and their component geographical regions and shows for each its numerical code. Under each region the names and numerical codes of the countries or areas that compose it are listed;

(c) Table 3 lists the country and area composition of various economic, trade and other groupings commonly used in statistics and their codes. These groupings are not necessarily inclusive of all countries or areas, and some countries or areas may appear in more than one;

(d) Table 4 lists in numerical order all the numerical codes and names of the countries or areas and groupings shown in tables 1-3 and other numerical codes used for special purposes;

(e) Annex tables A and B list changes in the country or area, regional and other numerical codes since the 1982 edition of the publication. Changes in the composition of regions which were assigned new codes are not shown but may be inferred by referring to the listings contained in the 1982 edition.

^a Bahamas is a member of the Community only.

^b The General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Committee for Development Policy, decides on the countries to be included in the list of the least developed countries.

^c There is no established convention for the designation of "developed" and "developing" countries or areas in the United Nations system. In common practice, Japan in Asia, Canada and the United States in northern America, Australia and New Zealand in Oceania and Europe are considered "developed" regions or areas. In international trade statistics, the Southern African Customs Union is also treated as a developed region and Israel as a developed country; countries emerging from the former Yugoslavia are treated as developing countries; and countries of eastern Europe and the former USSR countries in Europe are not included under either developed or developing regions.

^d Developing countries or areas are listed according to income level by the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development; see Development Assistance Committee, Development Cooperation: 1995 Report (Paris, Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development, 1996).
