

The Housing Data Coalition (HDC) is a group of individuals and organizations who collaborate on their use of public data to further housing justice in New York City.

In the face of the real estate industry's escalating exploitation of housing data to drive speculation and displacement, HDC seeks to make public data more accessible and actionable for housing justice groups.

A conversation with the NY Housing Data Coalition

- Robert Robinson, Special Advisor at Partners for Dignity & Rights and Professor of Urbanism at Parson New School University
- Katie Voorhees, Director of Data Science. The Bronx Defenders
- Lucy Block, Senior Research and Data Associate, Association for Neighborhood and Housing Development (ANHD)
- Noelle Francois, Co-founder and Executive Director, Heat Seek NYC