HOW DO NATIONAL TARGETS MEASURE UP TO GLOBAL VISION OF THE 2030 AGENDA?

Data & Analytics
SDG Agenda and the emphasis on nationalization
Title missing?
This study aims to understand:

1. To what extent countries have adopted child-related SDG targets
2. To what extent nationally set SDG targets measure up to the global vision
3. To what extent countries have adopted national SDG indicators
Study methodology

- UNICEF Country Offices (COs) were sent an Excel data collection tool
- Tool enquired about the country-specific situation of 23 child-related SDG targets, and 33 indicators

Limitations

• Only child-related targets and indicators were examined

• Responses represent low and middle-income countries

• Time limitations for data collection and the thematic scope of the targets
Many national target values remain to be set.
Countries set national target values for 15 or more targets

44 countries adopted 15 or more targets

But

Just 14 countries set national target values for 15 or more targets

20 countries set national target values for every target they adopted
Many national target values remain to be set
26 countries have not yet set any national target values
In 45% of cases, no target had been set, making it hard to measure ambition levels of national target values.
In 36% of cases, no indicator had been selected to monitor progress of the parent target. Only in 49% of all cases could the indicator be used to make inter-country comparisons or comparisons over time.
