Why measure now?

• We have never been as technically and methodologically prepared as now.

• National Statistics Offices are the first line of implementation, and the instruments respond to the frequent request of support we receive.

• To encourage our partners to invest their time and resources it is required to have a sound methodology that they can trust.

• Surveys are expensive and to invest in an operation we need to be certain that the data will be accurate and timely.
The main grounds of discrimination experienced among the total population were financial status (14.7%), region (11.8%) dialect (6.6%), marital status (3.7%).

Satisfaction with health services was 52.2% (clinics and basic health services).

80% expressed satisfaction when access the health services due to coronavirus*

72% of the population felt safe when walking at night (83.9 males; 60.8% females).

5.4% Experienced a dispute in the last 24 months

Most common dispute experienced is on Land, or buying and selling property – 31.3%

The second most common are neighbourhood disputes – 17.7%

Three most common dispute resolution mechanisms was the court – 70.2%

2% Experienced physical violence (2.9 males and 1.2 females)

2.9% experienced sexual harassment

7.7% experienced psychological violence

* Indicator is not part of the SDG framework but was adapted to the current context by the national implementation team.
Resources Available

Questionnaire
- Core questions (necessary to compute the indicator) and optative questions (to enrich data analysis)
- Instructions are given on each question/section
- Standalone
  - One reference year for most indicators
- Modular Approach to be integrated in a Household Survey
  - To address specific data gaps

Implementation Manual
- General Survey Introduction
- Sampling
- Interviewing guidelines
- Computerized Data Collection
- Data Processing and Estimation
  - Including Dissemination
- Disaggregations
- Questionnaire Modules Explanations
- Data Collection Tool – Survey Solutions

UNDP, UNODC and OHCHR
- Joint team of experts providing technical support and operational advice, open to engage with UN country teams and national authorities
