How does Open Data work?

- Business and Economics
- Crime and Justice
- Defense
- Education
- Environment
- Government
- Government Spending
- Health
- Mapping
- Society
- Town and Cities
- Transport

Open Data Philippines collects data from different government agencies and partner institutions, and converts them into formats that can be easily understood and analyzed. Search this website by topic or government department to find the data that you need.

What can Open Data do?

Data can be visualized, downloaded, and shared for free by anyone in the Philippines and around the world.

Use this data to learn more about how the government works, carry out your own research, or build your own applications using government data.

Create, issue, and implement National Action Plans for Open Government Data
Establish, implement, operate, and maintain the ODPH portal and shall ensure the efficiency, reliability, and security of the ODPH portal;

Ensure that the ODPH’s web-based content and services are integrated into the National Government Portal;

Collect and publish government and non-government datasets on the ODPH portal; and

Harmonize all existing open data portals of the government.
Open Data Task Force: Presidential Communications and Operations Office (PCOO)

- Coordinate with government and non-government agencies to promote open data disclosure in the Philippine government;
- Conduct outreach programs to mainstream data sharing and disclosure; and
- Align the ODPH to the Freedom On Information (FOI) initiatives of the government.
Promote the use of open data standards and formats to statistical data wherever applicable;

Create and implement ways to ensure that published data are usable, searchable, and accessible;

Ensure the integration of all public statistical data to the ODPH.
Open Data Task Force: Department of Budget and Management (DBM)

1. Ensure the alignment of the ODPH plans, programs, and policies with the initiatives of the Participatory Governance Cluster, particularly the Open Government Partnership;

2. Promote the release of publicly available data by including the publication of open data on the requirements of the Transparency Seal.
