

The Handbook on Population and Housing Census Editing has been released on the website of the 2010 World Programme on Population and Housing Censuses of the UNSD. The purpose of the handbook is to provide countries with a broad overview of census and survey data editing methodology and to provide information for concerned officials on the use of various approaches to census editing. It is also intended to encourage countries to retain a history of their editing experiences, promote communication among subject-matter and data processing specialists, and document the activities undertaken in the current census or survey in order to avoid duplicating effort during the next census or survey.
