

Annex 1

Statistical tables

List of Tables

- A1 National reporting of selected demographic statistics, 1995 – 2003
- A2 National reporting of statistics on births and deaths, 1995 – 2003
- A3 National reporting of selected education statistics, 1995 – 2003
- A4 National reporting of statistics on selected economic characteristics, 1995 - 2003
- A5 Population
- A6 Marriage, households and childbearing
- A7 Health
- A8 Education and literacy
- A9 Economic activity and maternity leave benefits
- A10 Employment characteristics and political participation

Annex tables A1 through A4

Annex tables A1 through A4 provide summaries of national reporting to the international statistical system for the period 1995 to 2003. Information in these tables refers only to official national data reported or made available to the United Nations and its agencies. This information forms the basis of the analysis presented in the chapters.

In the case of data from population censuses, the word “Yes” is used to indicate that a country or area has reported official statistics to the international statistical system from the 2000 round of censuses. In the case of statistics that are collected annually, such as those derived from administrative records or surveys, three numbers are used to represent the frequency of reporting by each country or area during the nine-year period from 1995 to 2003. The number “0” indicates that data was not reported for the period; “1” indicates that data was reported for one to four years in the period; and “2” indicates that data was reported for at least five years in the period.

The sources of information for annex tables A1 through A4 are the statistical databases of the international statistical system (United Nations, International Labour Office, UNESCO Institute for Statistics and World Health Organization). The figures reflect levels of reporting by countries or areas to the United Nations system and give an indication of the countries’ ability to produce and disseminate sex-disaggregated data. It should be noted, however, that availability of data in some countries may not be reflected in the tables if the data were not reported or made available to the international statistical system.

Annex tables A5 through A10

Annex tables A5 through A10 present updated figures for many of the statistics and indicators published in earlier editions of The World's Women, plus some additional relevant statistics and indicators of the status of women and men. The tables include, in addition to official data reported by countries or areas, estimates prepared by the United Nations and other international agencies. Therefore, the number of countries and areas for which information is presented in tables A5 through A10 may be greater than what is reflected in tables A1 through A4. Sources of data and footnotes are given after each table. The technical notes are provided in a separate pdf document entitled "Technical Notes for A5 to A10".

The statistics and indicators shown in the tables may refer to one specific year, to a year within a given period or to a period spanning multiple years. The time period covered is indicated in the column headings. A slash between two years, for example 1995/2003, indicates that the year to which data refer differs across countries or areas but falls within the interval given. A dash between two years, such as 2000–2005, means that the figures given are an average over the period shown.