1. General information on Chile

Geographical location

Chile is located in the extreme south-west of South America. Its capital city is Santiago and the country has a total population of more than 17 million. Chile lies between the Pacific Ocean and the Andes mountains and its long, thin territory is divided into 15 administrative regions.

General information on Santiago

Santiago is a city with a population of about 6 million. It has a Mediterranean climate and well-defined seasons, with rainy winters with temperatures as low as 0°C (May to September) and dry summers, when daytime temperatures hover around 30°C (November to March). Relative humidity is low and evenings are cool.

Buses, taxis and five subway lines serve the city's transport needs. Taxi fares are metered and, in general, drivers do not expect tips.

Tap water is safe to drink but the change of flora can upset foreign visitors, who are therefore advised to drink bottled water.

As in all big cities, it is advisable to avoid wearing expensive jewellery and to be careful with handbags and briefcases.

Climate

Northern Chile has a dry, hot, desert climate; the south is cooler and wetter, while the central zone has a Mediterranean climate. Precipitation falls mainly during the winter months.

In most of Chile, the four seasons are clearly marked:
