

The Inter-Agency and Expert Group on Gender Statistics (IAEG-GS)

13th Meeting

Session 6: Preparation for discussion on The World's Women 2020

UNSD has prepared this mini-questionnaire for all IAEG-GS members attending the 13th IAEG-GS Meeting. Your response to the questions below will feed into and guide the group activity proposed under Session 6 on Friday, 8 November 2019.

Mandated by the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, The World's Women series, produced at five-year intervals by UNSD, analyzes women's situation compared to men's worldwide. Six reports have been published so far as part of the series. Consistent with the past editions, the seventh edition will present the latest statistics on key gender issues and comprise multiple online products (no physical publication will be produced).

UNSD is bringing forward this flagship product at the 13th IAEG-GS Meeting to get the IAEG-GS experts' overall feedback on the seventh edition's new format and to identify partnerships to work together for an inclusive assessment at the global, regional, national and sub-national levels. Through improved coordination, UNSD aims to make the seventh edition aligned with many other reports prepared at the global level by harmonizing the information disseminated and to give more visibility to gender issues at the national and sub-national levels.

country/agency:

1- The World's Women 2020 will take a life-cycle approach, covering the following seven critical areas (in green). We are interested in getting to know more about the experiences of women and men that are of particular concern in your country (/agency). Please mark with an X from the list below the top five gender-relevant issues that your country (/agency) could illustrate in terms of data availability, gaps and trends to contribute to the global assessment. Feel free to use the drop-down menu to get an idea of the sub-themes that could narrate the situation of women and men descriptively- and feel free to make your own suggestions, if any.

Population and families	Pop. size by age and sex and changes over time	Aging and living arrangements
	Couples formation and dissolution	Fertility, childlessness and lone parents
Economic structures, participation in productive activities and access to resources	Rights to work	Access to income and HH decision-making
	Rights at work	Part-time and informal employment
	Work-life balance	Paid leave
	Physical and financial assets	Social protection
Education	Access to schools	Quality of education
	Women in research and development	Lifelong learning
Health and related services	Life expectancy/mortality	Health of children
	Youth/adolescent health	Health at reproductive ages
	Health at older ages
Power and decision-making	Legislative power	Executive power
	Judiciary power	Power in the private sector
	Influential power	Power at home
Violence against women and girl children	Violence against women and girls	Governments' and/or societies' response
Environment	Impact/effects of the environment on women and men	Impact/effects of women and men on the environment

2- If you were given the opportunity to narrate to the general public three key gender stories specific to your country (/agency) that are constructed with the themes and sub-themes proposed in question 1, which titles would you give to these stories tentatively? Please provide them in the boxes below.

3- Focusing on certain sub-groups of population has the potential to uncover additional aspects of gender equality and reveal more insights, at the national and sub-national levels in particular. Please highlight from the list on the left below, by clicking and selecting multiple options via the control key if necessary, all intersectionality dimensions captured by your country (/agency). In addition, kindly provide brief comments on your main results, in which these dimensions intersect with gender and impact gender equality at the national and sub-national levels.
