WW2020 innovative approach to empower users

- Online interactive publication with over 100 short narratives and 200 data series for a snapshot on gender equality in critical thematic areas of concern, based on latest data
- Visual publication for improved message communication and wider reach covering different angles - thematic areas, special topics, SDG regions, COVID-19
- Geo-spatially enabled data for increased insights
- Enhanced partnerships with Member States and UN agencies for wider thematic scope and deeper analysis, more granular than possible at international level

Online interactive publication

- Move from static paper publication, covering period since first edition in 1990, to interactive on-line portal
- Navigation between narratives according to the user's interest
- Several points of entry: thematic area, geographical region, COVID-19
- Mapping tool
- Data explorer, several download options

Visual publication

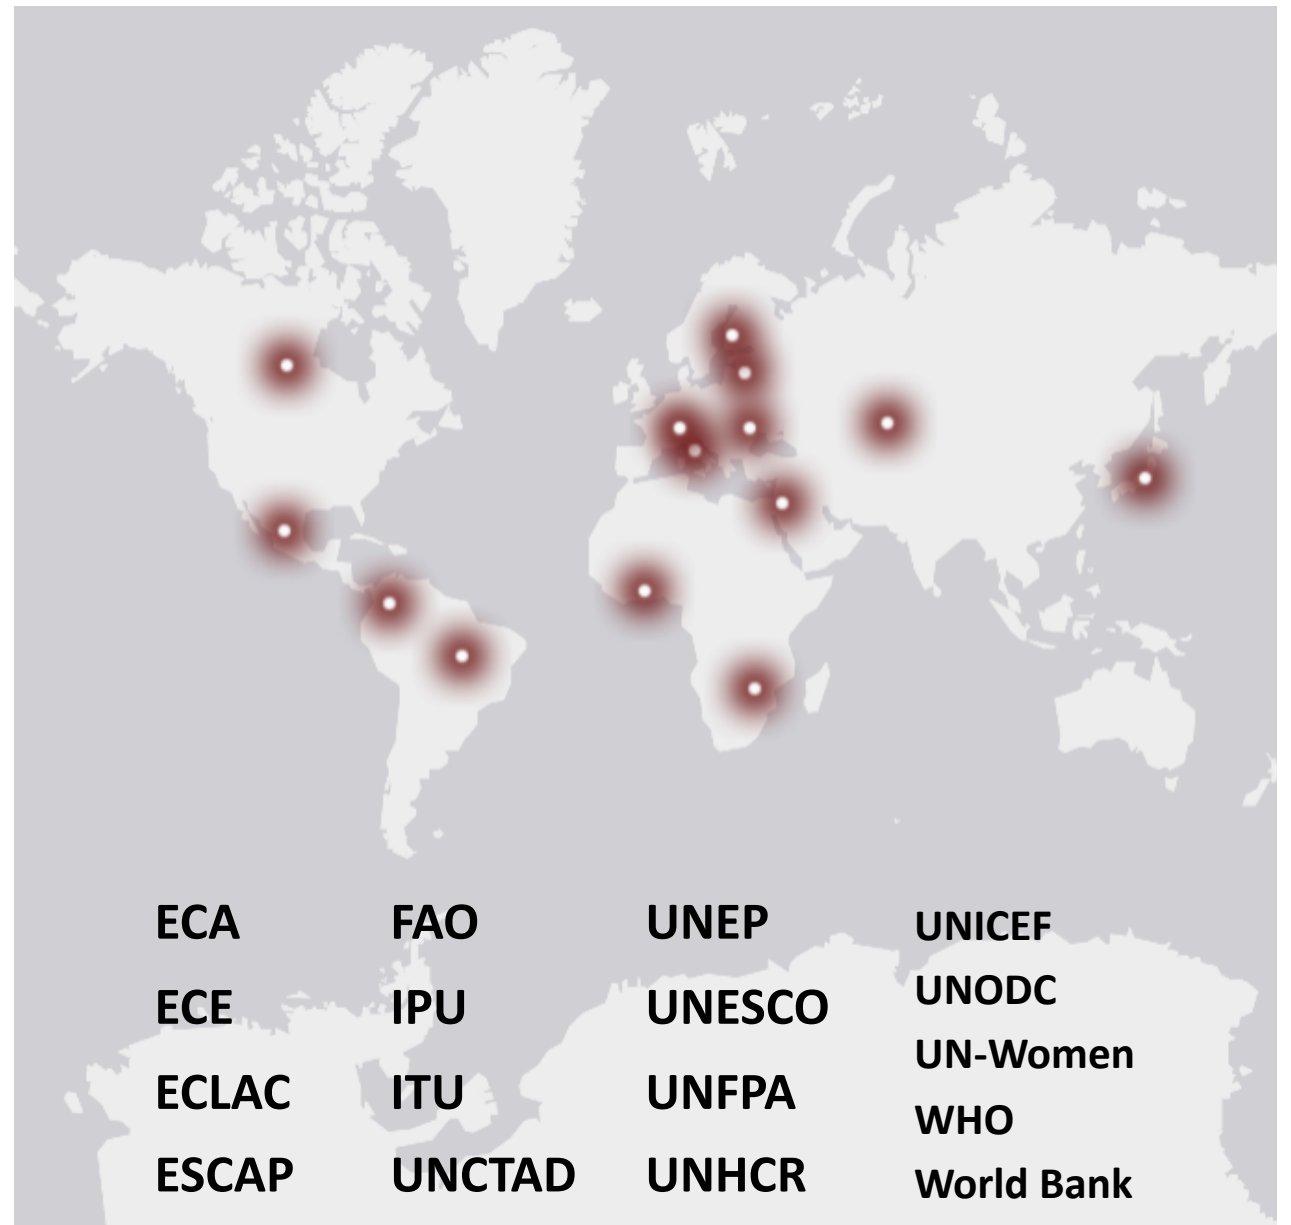

- Utilization of technology for improved message presentation
- Utilization of charts, tables, maps and images for enhanced communication
- Targeted to the wide public, diverse user groups world-wide
- Short and easy to understand gender narratives
- Main numbers at a glance (dashboard and key numbers)

Geo-spatially enabled data

- All 200 data series (global, regional, national) are geo-coded at the national level
- Ready-to-use maps in the data hub
- Users can also create their own thematic maps, layering data series as desired

Enhanced partnerships

- National statistical offices representation (14)
- Regional and international organizations (17)
- Expanded range of topics
- Deepened analytical granularity
 - ✓ Analysis at sub-national level
 - ✓ More topics covered by analysis, e.g., youth, older persons, ethnicity, disability, geography

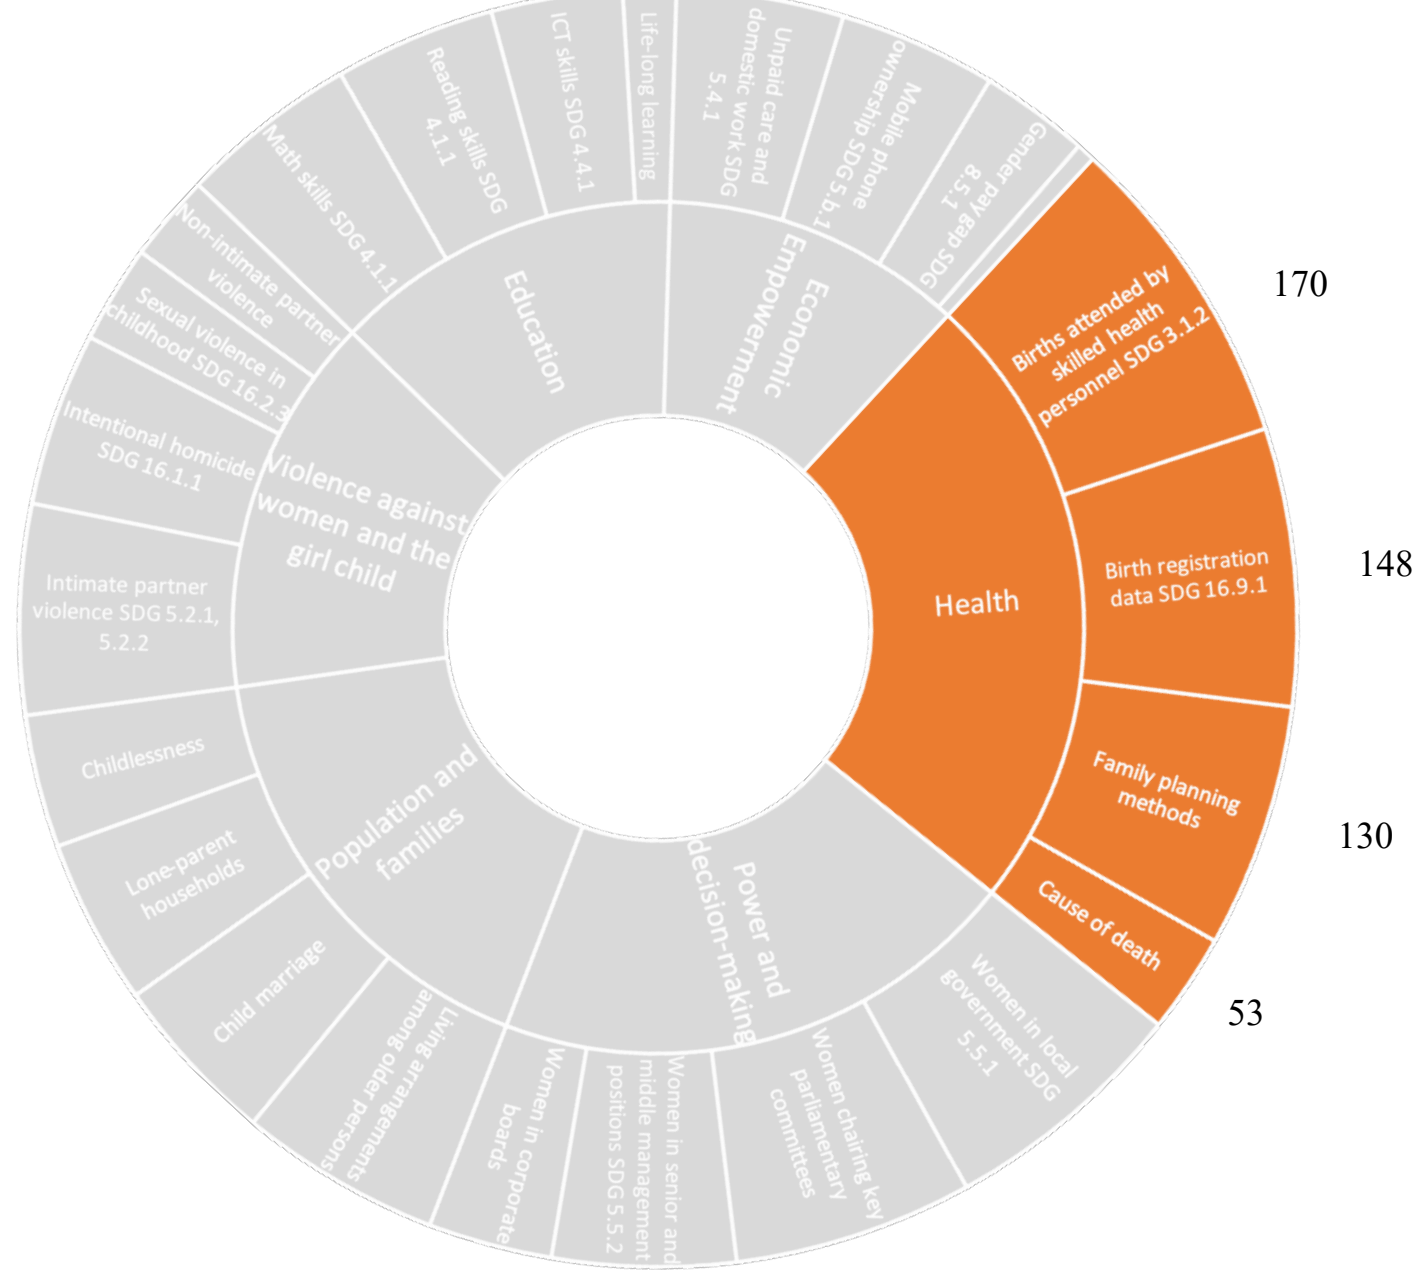

Availability of data for progress review

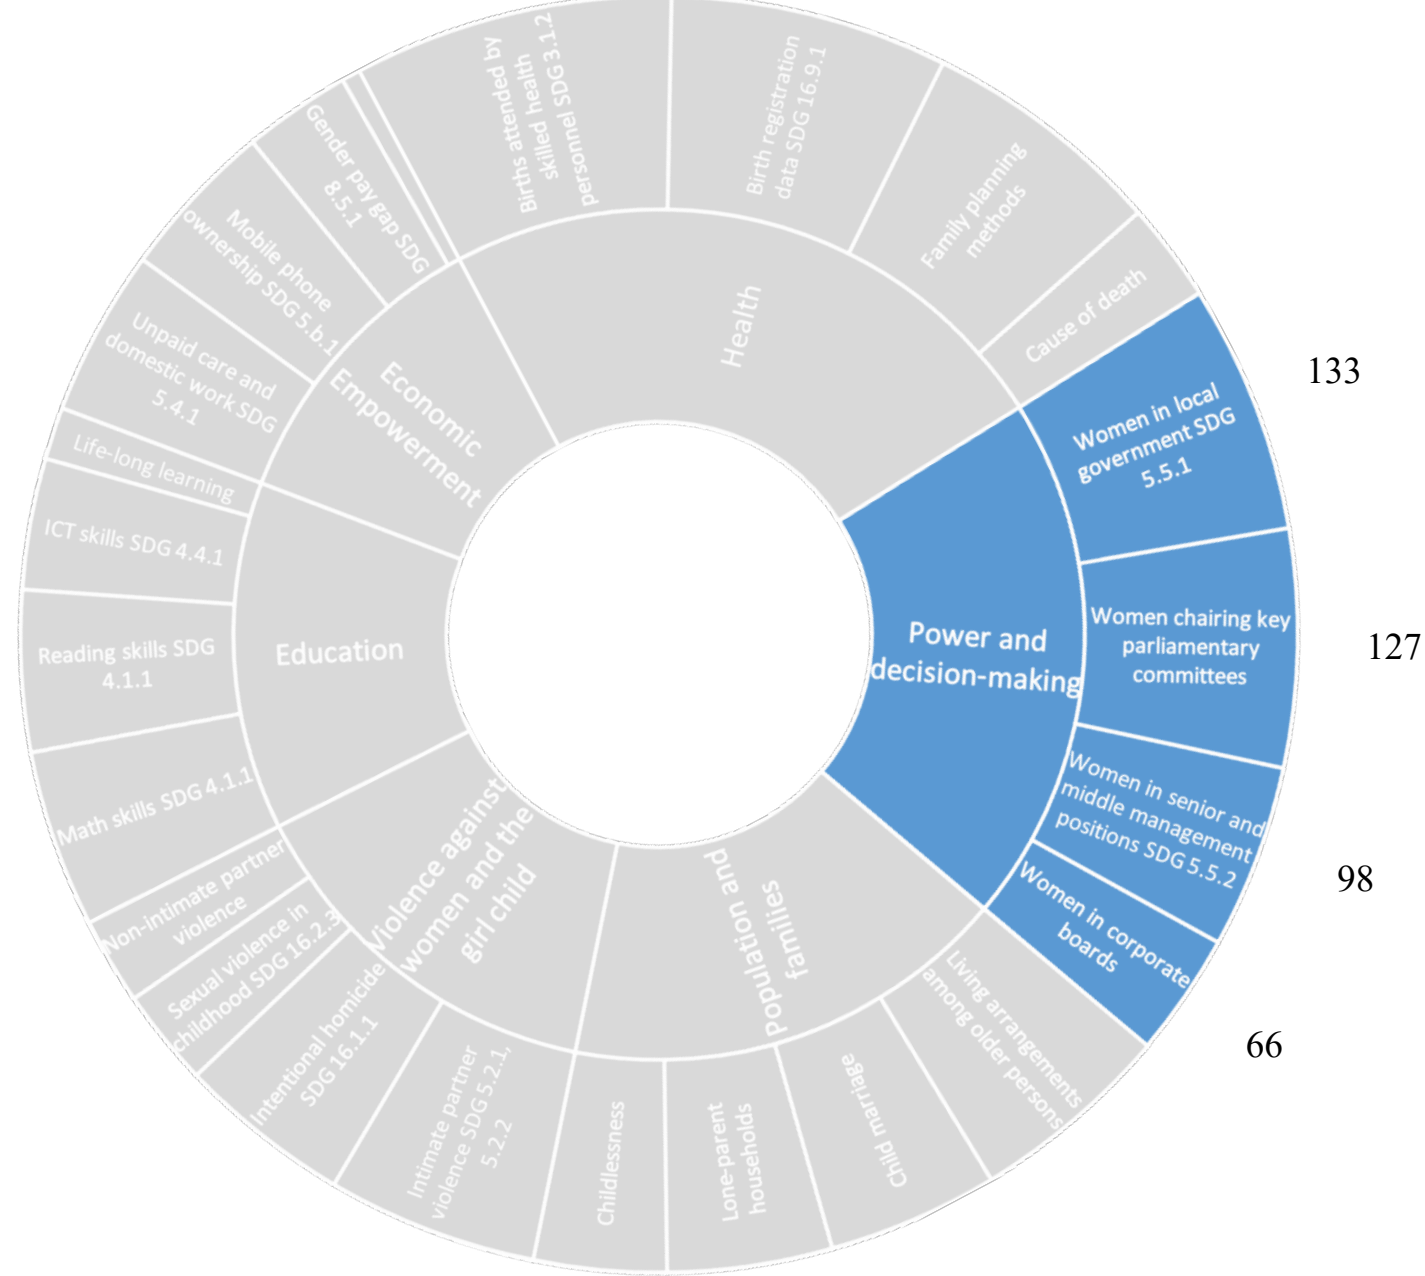

Reviews of progress on critical areas is an imperative input for evidence-based policy action

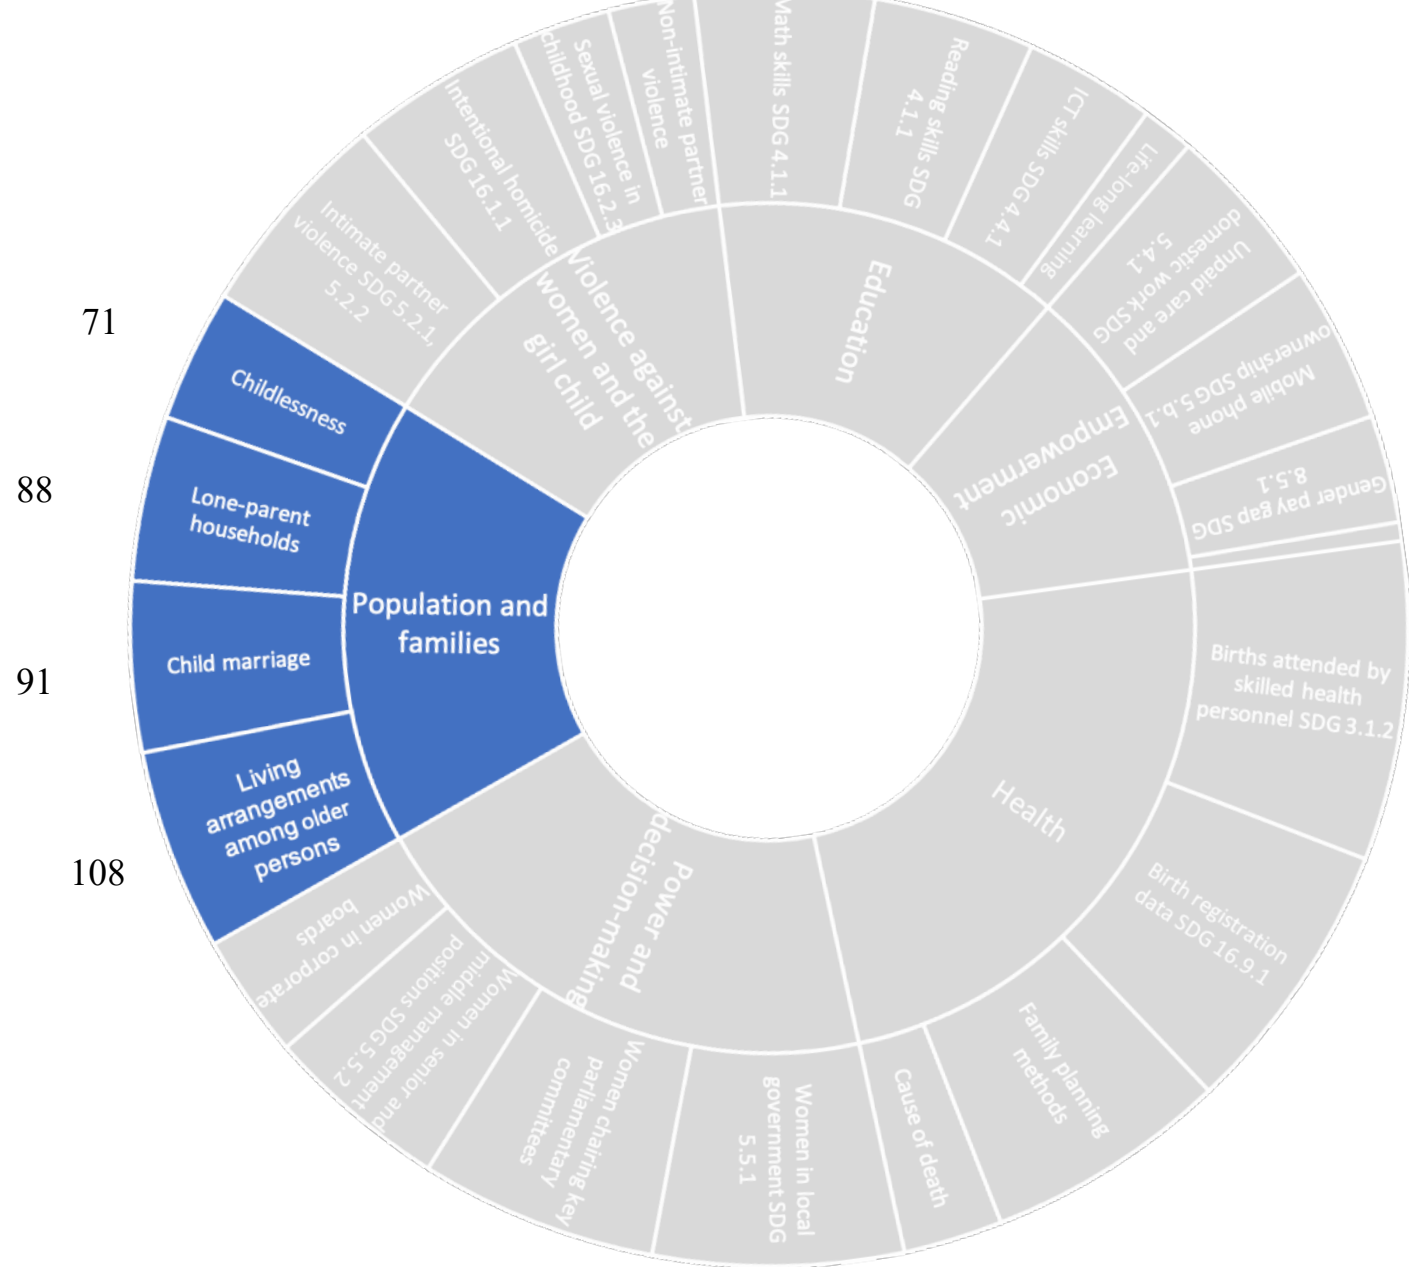

Availability of reliable requisite statistics, therefore, a prerequisite for progress assessment
