Part II: Comments on specific draft paragraphs or passages

In your review of this Add.1, you may wish to devote particular attention to the passages listed below. For ease of reference, we have identified the relevant paragraphs. For the each passage, a Word table is provided for you to use in making your comments. There is a row for general comments at the top of the table. Thereafter please use a separate row for each paragraph on which you wish to make detailed comments.

1. In order to clarify the limits of social benefits, paragraphs 8.79-8.82 of the revised text shown in Add.1 describe receivables by households from government, NPISHs and other units that are not social benefits. Do you find it helpful to clarify that such items are not treated as social benefits? Are the distinctions clear and sufficiently complete?

General comment	O.K.

2. Paragraphs 8.83-8.91 of the revised text shown in Add.1 set out the distinction between social security and social assistance. Institutional arrangements for the ways that government provides social benefits vary widely from country to country so that distinctions that hold generally are difficult to draw. Are these guidelines set out in these paragraphs clear? Can you think of any other way that is internationally robust to reinforce the distinction between social security and social assistance?

General comment	Not very clear. Examples of social assistance could be free(or at insignificant price) medical, education, water, basic food provided by governments or NPISHs to people below threshold

3. Section H of the revised text shown in Add.1 discusses the redistribution of income in kind account and its relation to the concept of actual consumption. Discussion of this account is not presently included in chapter 8 (either in the 1993 text or the draft of 1 August 2007). Do you agree this is a useful addition?

General comment	Section H describes more of social transfers rather than social benefits quoted in the heading
