Spain fully supports the proposal to convert the UNdata portal in a single reference point to access data for the UN system, which we consider quite useful and easy to access from the user’s perspective.

Regarding the characteristics and content of this portal, we would like to make some comments:

- We find it important to maintain clear references to the source of each data, and in the case of "country data", the official data from the national producers should be used, to the maximum possible extent.

- As regards the proposal for a federative architecture of the portal, we encourage the Division to make the most of the existing technologies to promote the use of automate data compilation systems, such as SDMX or the technology that is already being used by national offices to disseminate information.
