Mexico considers it is excellent news to know that the learning materials of the Data for Now initiative will be shared so that all countries can take advantage of them and use them. It would also be useful to have specific meetings on the initiative to be able to measure the challenges that the NSOs had to face during the process.

Mexico considers that the Global Network of Institutions for Statistical Training is an excellent initiative that allows sharing knowledge and training in statistical areas.

Mexico believes that the Global Network of Data Officers and Statisticians is an excellent initiative that allows to learn about events, experiences in monitoring the SDGs, training to come and other topics. The Network is also a space that allows the creation of thematic groups for exchanging knowledge among peers. It is also a repository to consult the available recordings and links of important events for the statistical community.
