Statement provided by:
Department of Statistics Jordan

Statement:

Most important observations:

Human settlements in Jordan are called camps and are located in several governorates of the Kingdom.

There is a definition of urban areas in Jordan as defined in the Department of Statistics: Urban areas have a population of 5,000 or more.

The Department of Statistics has data on the poverty level of the judiciary and a report published on the website for 2010.

The Department of Statistics has a Sustainable Development Section which conducts data collection work, including 1.6.11 objectives, disaggregated by source and availability of data.

Jordan is in the process of collecting data and preparing the draft report of the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan on follow-up to the new urban plan with the State Foundation for Housing and Urban Development.

Modern technology has been used to make data collection and link it to geographic location.
