

World Statistics Day in Thailand

The National Statistical Office of Thailand will organize the following activities to mark World Statistics Day:

1. 500 people are expected to take part in a half-day conference entitled “Statistics: It’s all about you!” on 15 October 2010. Participants should include Government Officials, political parties, academia, educational institutes, civil society organizations and university students. This event is organized under the auspices of the Prime Minister of Thailand, who will deliver the keynote address on the theme “Good statistics lead to good development policies”.
2. An exhibition entitled “Celebrating the Many Achievements of Official Statistics” will present a variety of products of the Thai National Statistical Office and by other statistical agencies such as the Ministry of Public Health (on the health information system), a private university (on how to conduct a poll), and the Thai Statistical Association (on statistical academic matters).
3. A posters exhibition “Celebrating the Many Achievements of Official Statistics” organized jointly with the UNESCAP Statistical Division on 20 October at the UN Conference Centre.
4. Article on WSD in a daily newspaper and a programme on the Thai National Broadcasting Corporation on 20 October.

Thailand, 11 October 2010