

WORLD STATISTICS DAY CELEBRATION IN CHILE

The International Association for Official Statistics is a section of the International Statistical Institute (ISI), one of the most traditional scientific associations in modern world. The IAOS Conference to celebrate WSD will be held in Santiago, Chile, in October 20 to 22.

An environment fair will be held as part of the event.

During this statistics meeting, experts will work to standardize environmental indicators that support government environmental policies, as well as economic, business and government activities. The conference's goal is to promote understanding and progress of official statistics and the environment, to encourage an effective development of services of official statistics through international contacts among individuals and organizations.
